

Participatory Laboratory for Active and Responsible Financial Education

For children, teenagers and adults

Conscious Consumers' finance - COCO fin

COCO fin makes financial literacy accessible for children, teenagers, and adults. In interactive two-hour workshops, participants explore earning, spending, and investing money. Key concepts such as taxes, social security contributions, and sustainable finance are introduced through engaging, real-life examples.

What can we do with it?

Where does money come from?

The COCO fin workshop for lower secondary students focuses on online games, family budgets, taxes, work, and earning money. We explore how money works – and experiment with ways to make a difference.

And what should we spend it on?

Can money work?

What can money do?

The COCO fin workshop for upper secondary students covers topics ranging from savings accounts and phone insurance to green finance. How do taxes work? Why do we pay social security contributions? What's the point of saving, and what's really behind Bitcoin?

How can sustainable investments create positive impact?
